01 My Radio Journey

From getting licensed in 2023 to discovering POTA and turning amateur radio into an adventure.

I've been in the hobby since the end of 2023. When I first got my license, I wasn't sure if I was going to like amateur radio. I listened to a few nets, but I didn't really know where I fit into the hobby. Then I got to hunting parks — and I loved it.

POTA is what made me fall in love with the hobby. A local Elmer helped me start activating, and I was hooked. It gave me a reason to get outside, put a radio on the air, explore somewhere new, and meet people along the way.

02 A Little Competitive

The numbers are fun — and sometimes I get a little competitive.

I'm pretty goal oriented in the hobby. I set out to be on the leaderboard of hunters with the most parks hunted that year. I finished 5th in the world and 1st in North America, and that took a lot out of me.

The next year I continued hunting and climbing the all-time leaderboard for hunted parks. I'm currently in the Top 60 in the world. I also started activating like crazy and slowly climbed to over 1,000 activations. That took a lot out of me too.

I also enjoy DXing and the occasional short contest. In the 2025 WWA Sprint, I finished 3rd in the USA in SSB and 227th in the world. So yes — sometimes I get a little competitive.

“POTA is what made me fall in love with the hobby.”

5 Favorite Websites for Ham Radio & POTA

The websites Brandon reaches for when hunting, activating, mapping, logging, and following the hobby.

01

POTA.app

The main home for Parks on the Air activity, park information, hunting and activating, and statistics.

02

POTAMap.us

One of my favorites because of the excellent park boundaries it shows. The map detail makes planning activations much easier.

03

Kentucky Portable Club

Of course, KPC's website — built around helping Kentucky hams discover portable operation, parks, and resources to get outside.

04

73QRZ.com

A useful amateur-radio resource that I like keeping in my rotation.

Visit →

05

PSK Reporter

A great tool for seeing where signals are being heard and getting a real-world picture of propagation.

BONUS • APRS.fi

Another favorite for tracking APRS activity and seeing stations and movement on the map.

04

5 Favorite Apps for Ham Radio

Apps that make portable operating, learning, finding activity, and staying connected more enjoyable.

01

HamAlert

Alerts for amateur-radio activity and stations of interest.

02

Morse Mania

A fun way to work on Morse-code skills and keep improving.

03

RepeaterBook

A handy reference for finding repeaters while traveling.

04

POLO Hams 2K

A favorite tool for amateur-radio activity and contacts.

05

DX Spots

Useful for keeping up with DX activity and finding stations to work.

5 Favorite Kentucky POTA Parks

These are places that have become special through years of exploring Kentucky with a radio.

01 Mammoth Cave National Park

"Mammoth Cave and the Green River area are my home parks. I've spent a lot of time down there, and there is something special about being near the world's longest cave."

02 Green River Wild & Scenic River

"The Green River area is home territory for me. It is one of those places where the outdoor experience and portable radio seem to fit together perfectly."

03 Daniel Boone National Forest

"The stunning beauty on that side of the state is what makes Daniel Boone such a special place to explore. There is always another view, another road, or another place to discover."

04 Kingdom Come State Park

"The name alone is awesome — and the views are amazing. It is one of those Kentucky places that reminds you why getting out and exploring is worth it."

05 Cumberland Falls State Resort Park

"Beautiful, beautiful, beautiful area. Cumberland Falls is one of those Kentucky destinations that makes a portable activation feel like an adventure even before the radio goes on the air."

06 Big South Fork National River & Recreation Area

"The beauty in East Kentucky is breathtaking. Big South Fork is another place that shows just how much there is to discover when you get off the beaten path."

Why I Do It

The leaderboard is fun, but it is not the whole reason.

I really do love going all over the state and seeing the beauty of places I never would have visited if it weren't for this niche part of the hobby. I have a lot of memories from exploring Kentucky.

Through KPC, I hope I can inspire more people to get into going portable and exploring the beautiful state that I call home. You don't have to start with a huge station or know everything. Find an Elmer, get outside, put a radio on the air, and see where it takes you.

“The radio is the excuse. Kentucky is the adventure.”

KPC'S MISSION

Help Kentucky hams get outside, get portable, and discover the places that make Kentucky special.

That is the part of the hobby Brandon hopes to share through the Kentucky Portable Club.
